

Report on Postgraduate Student visit 1st December 2017 until 28 Feb 2018, and April 2018 to June 2018 to Shibaura Institute of Technology, Japan

The outcome achieved by participating in the program

The Shibaura Institute of Technology (SIT) or the SIT has a large number of advanced facilities and opportunity which can facilitate in making a breakthrough in science, and it was my first time to be able to witness such advanced technology. Shibaura Institute of Technology (SIT) for allowing me to participate in the student exchanged programs. SIT has a good relationship with international students, and we have a lot of supports from the university. The student exchange program in SIT is an enriching experience. SIT is a world-class technical university as the university promotes research collaboration projects, as well as active learning (global PBL). I am spending the three incredible months in SIT, Omiya Campus. I am assigned to Department of Bio-science and Engineering to conduct my master program research. This opportunity of being to lab enables me to complete my cross-disciplinary research and improve my problem-solving skills. The lab is fully equipped with software and facility. I have learned new programming skill to control sensor and actuators, and simulation works for my project. Thus, all these elements contributed to my new knowledge. Will make a significant contribution to the low carbon effort worldwide. Not only that, during my stay in Japan, I observed two Japanese qualities, which have impressed me that are always being mindful of others and their dedication to excellence and precision. I found that these two qualities to be very important and have started adopting these two qualities to myself. Also, this program gives me an international exchange opportunity to build up my personally and professionally in a culturally different environment than I have been used to. During my first weeks in Japan, I experienced to overcome the language barrier. However, support from family, making new friends, and learning the Japanese Language changes my life here, and I become positive. I always tell myself that I had to finish my target and purpose in being here. I learned to get to know myself better and building my network globally. I am so happy that I go on this winter and I hope to visit Japan again!
